Renowned for their instructional stick charts that model and map the interplay of islands and waves, these students of wave piloting techniques embarked on trial voyages to ruprup jo̧kur, a Marshallese... and future thinking, one that is open to a wide range of methodological, epistemological, and political interests and commitments, the volume will encourage the writing of new histories of the Pacific and new ways for the region. Pacific Futures highlights futures conceived in the context of a modernity coproduced by diverse Pacific peoples, taking resistance to categorization as a starting point rather than a conclusion. With its hospitable approach to endeavour. With a view to the effects of the “slow violence” of climate change, the volume also challenges scholars to ... conditions of possibility for future-thinking at all in the midst of a global crisis that promises cataclysmic effects this “sea of islands”? Foregrounding the work of leading and emerging scholars of Oceania, Pacific Futures brings together a diverse set of approaches to, and examples of, how futures are being conceived in the region and have been imagined... “Voyages” maps migration and diaspora; “Family” delves into interpersonal and community relationships; and “New Micronesia” gathers experimental, liminal, and cutting-edge voices. This anthology reflects a... and economic development. The effect, overall, is an attitude of alert, critical ambivalence with respect to a proliferating historical phenomenon. A bumpy and... and tourism. The essays bring out many facets and experiences too quickly bundled under a single label and focused exclusively on “destinations” visited by “outsiders”. Tourism, we see here, actively involves many different populations, societies, and cultures. In this part, we focus on tourism to... the region’s northernmost atoll. These students—some of whom are second generation, third generation, and even more recent Korean arrivals—have been living in Majuro, home to the National University of the Marshall Islands, for the last half-century or more. We consider their experiences in the context of the ongoing processes of Americanization which have shaped Hammerfestian, Pacifico-american, and modern Marshall Island identities. Some of the stories are rooted in the Marshallese heritage which has always ranked impressive in the histories of many Pacific people. In these histories, the ways that have been used to interpret the country’s past are either biased or of secondary importance. It also challenges the reader to begin the reading process with a critical understanding of the Marshallese as a people and as a nation. It explains how contemporary Anthropocene thinking takes a particular interest in islands as ‘entangled worlds’, which break down the human/nature divide of modernity and enable the generation of... 2010-01-06 This handbook examines the fundamental role that islands play in shaping our world. It does so by engaging with islands as “living laboratories” where critical cultural and political experiments are taking place. The book aims to be a gateway to understanding the specific characteristics, culture, history, and politics of islands. The contents of this handbook reflect these characteristics and in so doing, it becomes a unique resource for scholars of Oceania, especially in articulating the nuanced cultural landscapes of the world’s islands. This volume presents a rich compendium of island stories that have shaped our world, from the earliest prehistory to the present day. It will be a valuable teaching resource for students of Oceania and other regional studies, as well as a reference and information source for readers interested in the political geography of the world’s islands. This handbook is a must-read for any scholar interested in Oceania or anyone else looking to learn more about the unique culture, history, and politics of islands. The book presents a unique perspective that has been... New Mana
Matt Tomlinson 2016-04-13 'Mana', a term denoting spiritual power, is found in many Pacific Islands languages. In recent decades, the term has been taken up in New Age movements and online fantasy gaming. In this book, 16 contributors examine mana through ethnographic, linguistic, and historical lenses to understand its transformations in past and present. The authors consider a range of contexts including Indigenous sovereignty movements, Christian missions and Baha’i translations, the commodification of cultural heritage, and the dynamics of diasporas. Their investigations move across diverse island groups – Papua New Guinea, Solomon Islands, Vanuatu, Fiji, Tonga, Samoa, Hawaii, and French Polynesia – and into Australia, North America, and even cyberspace. A key insight is that the concept of mana is not something that can be studied or taught in a vacuum; it is inherently linked to the ethno-cultural and historical contexts in which it is embedded.

Tides of Innovation in Oceania
Elisabetta Gnecchi-Ruscone 2017-04-07 Tides of Innovation in Oceania is directly inspired by Epeli Hau'ofa's vision of the Pacific as a 'Sea of Islands'; the image of tides is used to recall the cyclical movement of waves, with its unpredictable consequences. The authors propose tides of innovation as a fluid concept, unbound and open to many directions. This perspective is explored through ethnographic case studies centred on deeply elaborated analyses of locally inflected agencies involved in different transforming contexts. These narratives of change—cultural, economic and political—provide a common thread.
